Dedicated to Excellence

1/20/98

To Whom It May Concern:

Mark Saiki has served as a substitute teacher in both my International Relations 11th/12th grade elective and my 10th grade World History class. He has always done a superb job. He carries out my instructions exactly and leaves clear records of how each class went. My students tell me they not only enjoy Mark as a sub but learn a lot as well.

Mark has supported my teaching in ways other than being a competent and effective substitute. On a completely voluntary basis, Mark will leave literally stacks of background and reference articles which he created dealing with whatever topic was at hand the day he substituted. Many times, when he is substituting for another teacher in our department, he will use his free periods to come into my classroom and listen to my lecture. The next day, I'll have a stack of articles dealing with the previous day's subject matter. This level of interest in his job and willingness to provide academic support well beyond what is expected from a substitute is unprecedented in my experience.

With all that he has to offer - great rapport with students, deep academic expertise in his subject matter, and a willingness to share his knowledge with his colleagues - Mark should be in the classroom on a permanent basis as a full time teacher.

Sincerely Yours,
